Leisurely Adloyada Preparations

TEL AVIV, Thursday. — Despite the fact that the "Adloyada" festival is only a few days distant, Tel Aviv seems to be making its preparations almost at leisure. Many of the shops in the main thoroughfares have still to be dressed in their holiday finery and the inevitable rush for flags and costumes has not yet begun.

Even the construction of "arches of triumph" in Ben Yehuda and Allenby roads has not attracted the customary crowds curious about the unusual.

Two reasons are given for the apparent lack of interest, and both of them are based on the weather. The pessimists say that the parades and processions will have to be postponed because of rain, whereas the optimists have apparently been so wearied by the unreasonable shower that they cannot raise any enthusiasm.

Many of the participants in the "Adloyada" parade have insured themselves against fire for a total sum of IL30,000. The festival organizers are considering a "London" insurance company to insure against rain for a premium of IL5,000. Weather experts have stated that the possibility of rain during the holiday is "four to one against."

Closing time regulations for Tel Aviv shops will be waived altogether as from Saturday night until Thursday morning, the Municipality has announced. However, special permits to sell alcoholic drinks after closing time will be obtained from the police.

Mayer Haim Levano, of Tel Aviv will be a guest at a Purim Dinner for tourists at the Savoy Hotel here at seven o'clock on Tuesday night. The arrangements have been made by the Ministry for Religious Affairs, and reservations may be made through the Tourist Information Office here.

Scared Thieves Find They Stole Radioactive Bricks

PARIS, Thursday (UP). — Police arrested two men last night on charges of penetrating a security establishment and stealing a dangerous load of radioactive lead bricks. They also rounded up from junkyards 20 of the 238 bricks stolen.

These had been used to shield the walls at France's first atomic pile. The two, Rene Heron, 34, and Louis Thome, 21, did not even know the bricks were dangerous when they slipped through a fence at Fort Chailion, near the southern outskirts, loaded a truck with bricks, and drove away without being seen by security guards. They turned pale and trembled when they learned what they had stolen.

U.S. Hits Moscow's Expulsion of Priest

WASHINGTON, Thursday (Reuter). — The U.S. Government has protested against Russia's expulsion of an American Roman Catholic priest, Father Georges Bissonnette, the State Department said last night. The expulsion violated the agreements which the U.S. recognized the Soviet Government, it was claimed.

Father Bissonnette has been ordered to leave Russia by next Saturday. No reason was given for his expulsion.

A spokesman said unofficially that it might be retaliation for the Department's recent refusal to permit a Russian Orthodox prelate, Archbishop Boris, to extend his stay in the U.S. He added that the cases were in no way related.

OPPORTUNITY may strike tomorrow. Watch the "Business Propositions" in the Classified Column of The Post.

Life Now Dull For Ben-Haim

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV, Thursday. — Life has been a "little dull" lately for the composer Mr. Paul Ben-Haim, who recently wrote the screen score for "Hill 4 Doesn't Answer," the first major screen score to be composed in this country, shortly to have its premiere in Jerusalem. The music will be heard publicly for the first time when a recording, made from the soundtrack of the Israel-made picture, is presented on the Defence Forces' radio programme on Sunday evening.

The basis for the score is 20 bars of unaccompanied music inspired by the Biblical verse beginning "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem." This had to last one minute and one second. Ben-Haim's first experience of the immensely difficult task of writing "strictly according to schedule."

In all, the composer saw the picture 10 times so that he knew it "by heart." He heard from the director the sort of music needed for every scene and how long it should last, but was given complete freedom of interpretation. Sometimes it was necessary to express three or four moods in even as little as two-and-a-half seconds. The score, which lasts for nearly half an hour, was finally composed in three weeks. It was recorded for the soundtrack with the Army Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Shalom Ricklis, and the 150-strong Tel Aviv Chamber Choir under Eyal Nissim in 10 hours. Mr. Dickinson commented that this was faster than was usually possible, even in England.

Israeli Joins U.S. Nuclear Course

TEL AVIV, Thursday (UPI). — Mr. Joel Gutmann of Rehovot left today at the invitation of the U.S. Government, to participate in a seven-month course and research at the School of Nuclear Science and Engineering at the Argonne National Laboratory in Lemont, Illinois. This research at the school is friendly to the U.S. Government in its development of atomic energy.

Mr. Gutmann is on the staff of the Weizmann Institute, where he has been specializing in isotope research, including the use of the tracer technique in understanding chemical reactions. Before joining the Weizmann Institute, Mr. Gutmann served on the scientific research staff of the Hebrew University (of which he is a graduate) and of the Israel Government.

JAPAN TO GET U.S. JET PLANE PARTS

WASHINGTON, Thursday (Reuter). — The U.S. Government has agreed to supply Japan with jet aircraft parts and weapons to assist in the building up of the new Japanese Air Force. U.S. Department officials said here today.

Negotiations are now taking place in Tokyo, between defense officials of the two countries, but reported differences within the Japanese Government might delay a firm decision, they said.

A SPECIAL READING of this week's portion of the Law — Zachor (Remember) will be recited tomorrow from the "Seder" of the "Seder" synagogue on Mount Zion, in memory of those who fell in the War of Liberation. Bereaved relations are invited to the service, which begins at 9 a.m.

Nationality and the Israel Voter

c- unless he voted in Israeli elections

Some Countries Differentiate

The nationality of certain other countries, however, is lost by formal renunciation before foreign authorities but not

None of the provisions for loss of South African nationality under the Union's Citizenship Law of 1949 refer, for instance, to participation in foreign elections or to service in foreign armies, and no South African citizen has lost his nationality in Israel. One clause in the Law of 1949, however, does state that "a South African citizen who has voluntarily and formally acquired the nationality of another country acquires the citizenship of that country."

Last but not least on the list of countries which distinguish between the status of "autochthonic" and "naturalised" Israelis is Israel herself. Under the Law of Return, which grants automatic citizenship to all Jews upon the request of the Minister of Interior a district court may invalidate the nationality of a naturalised citizen — but not of a citizen who has been granted automatic citizenship.

Christian Commissions by Israelis

AT his studio in the former Talitha Kum building, Ludwig Blum is exhibiting a "Last Supper" which was commissioned for a private chapel in New York. The large canvas (1.50 metres by three) is conceived in impressionist chiaroscuro. The composition, original in its total abolition of the time-honoured Leonardo scheme, places Jesus at the left end of a long narrow table and directs attention by the strong movement of the hands of the disciples.

The scene is set in the historical "Cenaculum," the pillars of which provide division of space and everything on the table is strictly first century C.E. The Master, slightly stylized in contrast to the realistic apostles, is blackhaired and unmistakably Jewish. It is a strong and sincere picture, the contribution of a Jewish painter to a theme which I gather from Blum's studio (I gather from Blum's studio) has occupied no less than 50 Jewish historians and writers since Klammer's book appeared in 1928.

Another Jewish artist, Maurice Darbois, who had a successful exhibition at the Artists House last year, has painted a large altar piece for the same church. It is interesting that his conception of Jesus, blackhaired with high cheeks, is very close to Blum's. One is reminded of the marvelous Christ under the Cross by the great Russian painter, Repin, which hangs in a hidden corner of the vestry of the Russian Church on the Musliman in the Old City. When I once asked why this wonderful picture was so good, the answer was: "But Jesus looks so Jewish."

Darbois' over-life-size work in his bright spring colours does not fit well into the formalized neo-Gothic of the Notre Dame Church. I was much more impressed by the "Through under the Cross" and his house against a wide horizon, which hangs in the Notre Dame library.

Independence Day Poster TO the news from the Gideon Society of the Kfar Chitai, awarded first prize in the Independence Day Poster competition, it should be added that second and third prizes went to Jean David and Grundmann respectively.

This competition is Israel's most important in Applied Arts. It is a Jewish artist's year, all 70 designs entered will be shown at an exhibition.

Unique Collection AT the Bezalel Museum I had the happy opportunity of viewing the unpublished work of the Ayala Zacks Collection of French Art, which will be exhibited beginning March 12. To see all these Picassos and Modiglianis, Duflys and Koonings, the paintings of Max Klee, Miro and Utrillo emerge from their wrappings was an unforgettable experience. This is an exhibition of contemporary French art comparable to this collection has not been seen here.

Exhibitions in Tel Aviv

Nabum Gutman

NAHUM Gutman recently returned from New York, where he held a successful one-man show, and is now exhibiting his latest works at the Tel Aviv Museum.

This painter is one of the best watercolorists in the country with a whimsical yet sympathetic approach to the Israeli scene and the possessor of great facility. His Saffed scenes are delightful, showing the various stages of the one work - from "inferior" to "superior."

This is a delightful exhibition which affords an hour's retreat into the calm and ordered world created by Hiroshige.

S. Miller

MRS. S. Miller, of Haifa, is currently having her first exhibition at the Kfar Chitai. She shows oils, pastels, a few drawings and a couple of watercolours. The general effect of the show would have been improved if the selection had been better.

Mrs. Miller has obviously received a sound academic training and on the whole her work is thoughtful and careful even if most of it can be characterized as "good student effort."

In the children's portraits, however, she attains a much higher level. Her oil paintings of a little girl and of a small boy holding a piece of fruit are not only well drawn, they are invested with an appealing sympathy and tenderness, as is also her study of an elderly woman. Among the many landscapes executed in pastel there are two very pleasant sketches of the Channel, No. 2 and No. 3, depicting wild stretches of country are particularly effective and painted with assurance.

Hadgadya

MARUSYA Heron, better known as Hadgadya, is now having her first show at Tel Aviv after an interval of 15 years during which she has been living in the U.S. She shows 58 paintings, all of them gouaches.

Radio Review

South Africans Get Kol Zion

AN important development in this country's broadcasting services is the inauguration on Sunday of Kol Zion Lagolah's nightly transmission to South Africa. When Kol Zion commenced broadcasting in 1950 it beamed only to Europe and North Africa (with an occasional listener in North America). The initial disappointment caused to South Africa Jewry was illustrated at the time by a cartoon in the local press depicting a family bent over their radio set trying in vain to hear Israel. The desirability of reaching this important community was fully recognized here and the practical execution of a direct broadcast was in the first place dependent on technical considerations.

Meanwhile, the South African Zionist Federation tried the experiment of buying time over the commercial wave-length of the South African Broadcasting Service to put out the "Menorah Hour" every Sunday afternoon. Unfortunately, not only was it not heard by the radio authorities, necessitating almost complete omission of reference to Zionism and only the most oblique mention of Israel - left no alternative but to broadcast only musical selections and after a short time the service was discontinued. Contact had, however, been struck up with Kol Zion Lagolah and recordings of outstanding features were sent to the Zionist Federation offices in Johannesburg, from which they were distributed throughout the Union for use in educational and cultural work.

Over two years ago, a new transmitter was installed in Israel. Its strength was decided severally to broadcast programmes to South Africa. The first test broadcasts were made on Sunday afternoons but reception proved inadequate and was corrected by the installation of a new 10-kilowatt transmitter with built-in antenna at Yotvata, reaching South Africa, a special

STAR-GAZING

SOMEWHAT less brilliant this month, Jupiter is still brighter than Sirius. It is therefore the first to appear at dusk, its steady glow contrasting with the scintillating light of the Dog Star below. On the 16th, Jupiter assumes direct (east-west) motion and approaches Castor and Pollux slightly more. It will be very close to the moon on the evening of the 21st.

Among the fixed stars that are worthy of attention at nine a.m. at the beginning of the month are the Chariot, the Bull and Orion in the south-west and the Pleiades sinking in the West. Comet Sirine and Procyon have passed the culmination (their greatest elevation).

The spring constellations appear in the east and in the south-east by dawn. Pollux, the twin of Regulus, is exactly on the ecliptic (apparent path of the sun in the heavens). Between the Leo and the Taurus line Castor, devoid of bright stars but adorned by the open cluster of Praesepe, exactly halfway between Regulus and Pollux.

Spica, bluish white, and Arcturus, a yellowish red, have just risen and form a huge isosceles triangle with Regulus at the apex. The January "Star Gazing" should be read. It is brighter than Castor and Pollux.

QUESTIONS PLEASE

WASHINGTON, (UPI) - The United States Department of Labor has started, as a modest scale, an experiment that seems to be of great value to the modern welfare state. At the big bus terminal in New York, there is a special telephone booth in which one picks up the receiver and is connected directly with a voice which says: "This is the Labor Department's message center; may we help you?"

The caller may ask "How can I get a job?" or "Why don't I get a job?" and some one will try to give him the answer. If the caller asks a straightforward question about jobs, as most of them do, he gets a verbal answer. More detailed information is posted to him.

When the Department started this service, it expected the line to be heavily used. It was not. The line was used by a few people, but not many. This is indeed very bad news for the fish, for recent tests in the North Sea proved that the catch is increased by as much as 500 per cent whenever UTV is used.

UTV first captured the public's fancy when millions saw the wreck of the Comet airliner recovered off Eilat last year. The aid of UTV cameras, which filmed the whole salvage operation for the international newsreels. The latest UTV models can be used at depths of as much as 1,500 metres, and their lenses can be altered by remote control, so that they can close-up, with the focus also changing automatically. The new Marconi UTV camera, which will be used by British fishing fleets, utilizes the Stanning Eye, able to rotate 360 degrees to reveal the whole underwater picture, without the camera itself having to be moved.

The new floating UTV model is able not only to talk fish from rocks or other objects, but to distinguish schools of small fish from each other. Knowing the exact composition of an average school of herring, for instance, a UTV operator can disregard all other blips on his screen and scan the waters for herrings only.

Fishing by Television

BRITISH fishing fleets will now have with them pilot vessels equipped with UTV (underwater television), according to Professor Humphrey Barnes, Head of the Marine Biological Association of Scotland. This is indeed very bad news for the fish, for recent tests in the North Sea proved that the catch is increased by as much as 500 per cent whenever UTV is used.

The new floating UTV model is able not only to talk fish from rocks or other objects, but to distinguish schools of small fish from each other. Knowing the exact composition of an average school of herring, for instance, a UTV operator can disregard all other blips on his screen and scan the waters for herrings only.

Dressing Up for Purim

By Ruhama Haskel

THIS masquerading is a funny thing. I suppose it is motivated by that inherent quality in Man always to wish to be something other than he is. Even in childhood, the happiest games are those in which you pretend to be not you but something else. Anything will do. If you are a boy you pretend to be a girl. If you are the youngest you pretend to be the oldest. You pretend to be a wolf, a steam-roller, a flying pan. Anything, anything, so long as it is something which you are not. Later on in life, this inexplicable urge is expressed in "Dressing Up" for balls, carnivals etc. or, in extreme cases, in imagining oneself to be Napoleon.

Someone I know once dressed up as a telescope. He constructed an intricate contraption composed of three cylinders, fitting neatly into each other, in the centre of which were two holes for the arms and two slits for the eyes. He was quite unable to sit down, nor could he look through the telescope, and was obliged to turn his whole structure when he wished to re-direct his glance. However, he seemed to think it worth while. On my part, I did not wish any purpose in his getting into the thing. It looked very much the same without arms which contributed little to the general effect. At first he was very proud that nobody could recognize him, and then he insisted on taking part in the prize winning contest.

He stepped upon the platform amid warm applause, when the top part of the telescope fell in. The audience took this to be a demonstration of the telescope's wonderful properties, and applauded more loudly than ever. In actual fact, the thing had fallen over his head and he could not see a thing. Not wishing to spoil the impression, he walked on gracefully, if carefully, and, with admirable dignity, proceeded to descend from the platform just one foot to the left of the steps. Being quite inflexible at all points, he plunged from within being drowned in the hubbub which arose in trying to determine by experiment whether the thing should be collapsed or extended to get him out, and whether the telescope was on his back or on his stomach. I may as well say here that he suffered no prolonged ill effects, and was successfully extracted by having the telescope sawn in two.

My uncle tells me of a friend of his whose travels had taken him to some out of the way place in Africa. Bulawayo, I think he said it was. It was round about Purim, and my uncle's friend happened to remark to an acquaintance how homesick he was, and how jolly it would be at home now that Purim was here. The acquaintance told him to cheer up, that there were Purim parties in Bulawayo too, and that he would take him to a "Purim Party" the like of which he had never seen. He was being facetious but my uncle's friend did not realize it at the time. He loved dressing up and the siller he looked the happier he was.

He weighed several possibilities, one of which, I believe, was to appear as Venus Rising from the Foam. Finally, however, he decided upon the costume of a negro tribesman, and went to endless trouble to acquire the necessary equipment. He blacked himself from top to toe, and, being rather friendless in those parts, encountered some difficulty in doing his back and had to pay a little street boy to do it for him. He told my uncle that in retrospect he remembers seeing a picture of him in his quaintance's eye when he came to call for him and found him in a state of undress, blacked all over, with a nose-ring in his left nostril. At the time, however, he put it down to speechless admiration.

The "Purim Party" turned out to be a wedding festival of some neighbouring negro tribe, with whom my uncle's friend's acquaintance had become friendly. My uncle's friend had succeeded with much pains in getting himself to look exactly like all the others present, and nobody noticed him at all until someone remarked upon the different way in which he sported his nose-ring. He was then assumed to be a visitor from some other tribe, and was treated with much hospitality. He told my uncle that the chief of the tribe was even kind enough to offer him the loan of one of his wives, which, at the risk of offending his host, he declined.

The relationship between my uncle's friend and his acquaintance became rather strained after that. I understand that they are still not on speaking terms.

By Molly Lyons Bar-Devid

ON Purim one is supposed to drink to "ad-lo-yadda" (until one doesn't know what it's all about) but the Jews being a sober race, other ways of making merry seem to take precedence over the charms of the bottle. Purim foods simply drip in honey and wade in nuts and poppy seed. Purim customs bring joy in the best of all ways by shock, humor and sending a plate of Purim confections and cakes and other treats to one's family and closest friends. Every family has its own Purim feast, at which traditional Purim dishes are served. Some of these have come into custom by the sound of their names in Yiddish. For instance, poppy seed, which is Mohn in Yiddish, sounds like the "Haman" the villain of the day. Haman is the name of the villain of the day, Haman is the name of the villain of the day, Haman is the name of the villain of the day.

Women Make Bad Spies

By a Special Correspondent

WOMEN make rotten spies, according to Bernard Newman, top British authority on espionage and author of best-selling books on the subject. Speaking at the Royal Society of Arts to an audience composed mainly of women, Mr. Newman declared that female spies are not glamorous, very seldom beautiful and mostly inefficient. The really successful spy, he said, was "a very ordinary man sitting behind a newspaper in a railway carriage."

According to Mr. Newman, Mata Hari was a failure as a spy, though she was a very successful prostitute. She committed all the mistakes in the book and was caught on her first mission. The only function of cloak-and-dagger work which women can fulfill is that of messengers. Pregnant women, or young mothers with babies are especially good at it. The most efficient messenger for the British Intelligence Service during the last war was a woman who secreted information in hollowed out candy bars which she gave her baby to chew during inspections and controls. Several of these candy bars are now on display at the Imperial War Museum.

MR. Newman said that the only place where women spies are still employed on a large scale is in Berlin. The best known of them is 34-year-old Irmgard Schmidt, known in professional circles as Die Schöne Frau, who stole top-secret U.S. documents as the mistress of the American colonel in command of the Berlin Office. Air Intelligence But even she was a flop, because she fell in love with a young German and told him about her work, with the result that she is now in jail. Most of the women spies live in East Berlin and travel nightly to the Western sectors to pick up lonely officers at the night spots. They are known professionally as Tischchen (table girls) and their pay is very low — about ten marks per night. THE British Intelligence in Berlin doesn't use female operatives, but the Americans do, with varying results. At least ten Soviet officers deserted to the West in 1953 and 1954 after being involved romantically with German girls who worked for the Americans, but more than 30 girls fell in love with their objects and chose to remain in the East and work for the Russians.

Mr. Newman added that the new German Intelligence Service employs women in research and administration only, but not as operatives.

In spite of this discouraging report on the future of women spies, 11 women asked Mr. Newman after the lecture where to apply for Intelligence work. To this he replied diplomatically that spies do not apply: they are picked.

Diary of a Housewife

By Hadassah Bat Haim

WE are invited by some American friends to join them at Scrabble. After cordially accepting the invitation, as soon as we are alone the Head of the House asks me what it is I reply with confidence that it is a kind of breakfast food eaten in the Deep South together with honey grits and flapjacks, but I don't know why they should ask us to come in the evening for it is strictly a morning food. This I know from having read the book, The Housewife's Handbook, but I don't know what it looks like, or how it tastes. The Head of the House says as long as it is not from fish he doesn't mind.

It turns out, however, that Scrabble is something quite different. A cross between Quiche and an omelette. Head of the House says it's curious that my mind only runs on food. I say it's not at all curious and it sounds like food anyway. Food is served during the evening, consisting of cakes which our hosts call cookies and biscuits which they call crackers.

WE settle down to Scrabble. I shall only be able to make words in Czech as I have no vowels. Eventually I consider very smart, but Head of the House promptly adds "ology" and gets my points and his points doubled. "my" which I consider very smart, but Head of the House promptly adds "ology" and gets my points and his points doubled.

THE Americans take an unfair advantage by using merrier spelling which means enough is found in their dictionary, and which principle does not allow me to copy, but of course the whole game is a walkover for the Head of the House who is the only one of us who can spell properly.

WE decide on the way home to get one of our own. The Head of the House says I must be careful not to serve as breakfast. He also says that if it will teach me to spell several people will be very grateful, and to further that aim I leave the copybook and take a dictionary to bed.

For Men Only

COMPLAINTS have reached me that men would like something written about them in this column. They would like to know how to care for their skin and hair.

It is quite true. Little is written about good grooming for men, which always seems so simple as the rhyme:

Babies haven't any hair, Children's heads are just as bare, Between the cradle and the grave, Lies a haircut and a shave.

It is usually the shaving that troubles men. If the skin is sensitive and the growth of hair great, daily shaving irritates the skin and makes shaving an ordeal. It is of great help for such men to apply a little cold cream at least a quarter of an hour before shaving. This makes the hair softer and shaving much easier. The use of an after-shaving lotion is another great help, as it prevents little cuts getting infected and closes the pores.

What has been said about the care of women's hair applies much in the same way to men. Men suffer to a higher degree from dandruff and falling hair, and here again soap making is one of the best remedies. Hair oil, hair lotion containing alcohol or a hair balm that may contain sulphur are to be chosen according to the type of hair and its condition. A shampoo at intervals of from one to two weeks and the application of some brilliantine makes the hair manageable. Wetting the hair or, worse, drying it under the shower every day is not recommended, as it often causes loss of hair.

Any other questions? LIESEL HIRINGER

Toe-ing The Line

LONDON. — Radio Moscow hinted today that Russia is following the Western line on fashions this summer. There will be "rather lower necks." More legs will show, too — for men.

Alexei Kulechov, head designer of a Moscow Fashion House, said in a Moscow Radio interview that "trousers are narrower and a little shorter." The designers are now working on summer styles. Kulechov said, "For frocks, there are rather lower necks, very short sleeves, in one piece with the frock, and wide skirts. Bright-colored waistcoats will be fashionable," he said. (UP)
